DICKERSON—JENKINS

A wedding of widespread interest was solemnized Tuesday evening at 8:30 in Liberty Baptist Church here, when Miss Josephine Sullivan Jenkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spurgeon Jenkins, became the bride of Captain Jack Marvin Dickerson, United States Army Air Corps, son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Dickerson, of Kenbridge, Virginia. The bride's pastor, the Rev. Frederick Jones, was the officiating minister, the ring ceremony being used. The church was decorated with cathedral candles, palms and white flowers.

An organ prelude was rendered by Miss Cornelia Kane Gills: "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," "Valentine Love Song," "Barcarolle Serenade" and Mr. John Curtis Caldwell sang "Because" and "At Dawning."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of ivory slipper satin fashioned with high round neck, scalloped yoke of marquisette, long sleeves tapered to points over the hands, shirred panel basque bodice with the fullness of the gathered skirt forming a sweeping train. Her full length veil of imported illusion dotted with buds or orange blossoms fell from a bandeau of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift from the groom. She carried a cascade of white bridal flowers.

The bride's ring was carried by Master Jack Caldwell. The maid-of-honor was Miss Ruth Stone of Richmond, who wore a mellon jersey back waist with chiffon skirt, sweetheart neckline, with matching embroidery. The brides maids, Miss Virginia Christian of Appomattox, Madames William H. Daughtery of Blackburg, a sister of the groom, and Robert E. Garrison of Norfolk, were gowns in mellon and aqua, fashioned like the maid-of-honor's. They carried arm bouquets of variegated garden flowers. The mistress of ceremonies, Mrs. John Curtis Caldwell, was gowned in blush pink crepe with a corsage of variegated flowers.

Wilson Dickerson of Kenbridge as his brother's best man. The roomsmen were Charles Jenkins, brother of the bride, Jack Trafton, Jr., of Norfolk, Beckham Dickerson of Richmond and Harold Dickerson of Norfolk, both brothers of the groom.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Charles Spurgeon Jenkins, wore for the occasion a gown of dusty pink lace with a corsage of orchids. The groom's mother, Mrs. James T. Dickerson wore aqua lace and a corsage of pink rosebuds.

The bride is a graduate of Willard and Mary College and of the Washington School for Secretaries. Captain Dickerson, who was recently stationed in Trinidad, is a graduate of V. P. I.

Mrs. Dickerson's going away costume was of beige with brown accessories, and a corsage of orchids. Captain and Mrs. Dickerson will after the wedding trip, make their home in Jacksonville, Florida, where Captain Dickerson is stationed for the present. Later they will be at Langley Field.

Immediately following the marriage ceremony a reception was rendered the bridal party and friends at the home of the bride. Mrs. Hugh Lee Garrett of Petersburg, poured punch. The house was decorated in vari-colored garden flowers. Among those attending the wedding and reception from out-of-town were the following: Mr. and Mrs. James T. Dickerson, Jr. and Mrs. Dexter L. Wrenn, Mrs. Bernice Copley, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson L. Dickerson of Kenbridge; Mr. and Mrs. William Daughtery of Blackburg, Mr. and Mrs. Beckham Dickerson of Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Dickerson of Norfolk, Mr. and Mrs. Jack G. Trafton, Jr., of Norfolk, Mr. Wilton H. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Granville Chappell, Mrs. George Elliott Cheatham and Mrs. Herman Phenix of Crewe, Mrs. John Young of Prospect and Mrs. Hugh Lee Garrett of Petersburg.

Since 1865 American stockraisers have been taking their animals to the Union Stockyards at Chicago, maintaining an institution that helped to make America great.

In Hitler's Europe the farmers are producing too, but their product goes to Nazi Germany to feed the soldiers who are shooting thousands of prisoners who object to this form of tyranny.

Judgin from the wide-eyed and enthusiastic reports of its large following, I think you've missed something if you haven't been to the cannery yet. Haven't you seen the scores of women heading for the dormitory, ladened with corn, string beans, pots and pans, etc.? This exodus began several weeks ago and since then the cannery has been a place of steam, fun, and mild elbow grease. A lot of the credit for this venture goes to its leader Mrs. Geore Wilkerson. Lucy Charlton, and Professor Wilkowitter, whose time and efforts have been wasted. Champion canners, I hear, (and people was still eat this winter) are Mrs. S. S. Shouse and Mrs. Jim Harvey.

Social highlight of the week was the wedding of Josephine Jenkins to Captain Jack Dickerson. The color scheme for the bridesmaid's dresses, cerise and aqua, was lovely and Josephine's own dress. Among those at the reception looking especially nice were Mrs. Clara Baber in a blue crepe gown, Mrs. Mabel Purdum in a pink sheer, with an ostrich plume trim, and Eleanor (Harwood) Dahl, looking attractive in a red and white taffeta. The bride and groom left after the reception for Virginia Beach to stay briefly, before leaving for Jacksonville, Fla., where they will live.

Here fo the week-end were Walter and Helen Durham and two children, Susan and Jane, of Richmond, visiting Walter's sister, Alpha Higginbotham. Everybody was as much captivated with little Susan and Jane as the little girls were with Appomattox.

Passed by the hotel the other day and saw clever Alice Babcock doing over an antique bed. Besides collecting antiques, she is also an authority on old glass and china, and from what I hear Alice's Columbia, South Carolina, home must be somewhat of a Louvre with its many collections.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Brighten your house, for the summer months with slipcovers. You can actually make these yourself with a few yards of gay chints and a little patience.

Choose your colors with a thought to the effect you want. Bring cheerful colors to your dining room with slip covered, quilted backs for your chairs that lace on, middy blouse fashion, up the sides. Make a quilted pad to match for the seat, and attach a brief ruffle.

A slipper chair in your bedroom done in a cool solid color, with a harmonizing striped, ruffled flounce to the floor, will make an eye-catching spot in your room.

Low-Cut Necklines Tell New Fashion Story

There is a new movement in necklines that will be a dominating influence in blouses and dresses from now on. The collar opening continues down to form a low deep slender point. Some dresses have an extra little camisole device put on for more formal occasions. The deep-throat effect is extremely flattering. To wear at the low point, stunning jewelry clips are being especially designed. They will tell a fascinat ing new fashion story.

Britain Bans Hot Water In Government Buildings

LONDON.—Whitehall, whose civil servants are the most carefully protected workers in Britain, may soon become known as the Street of Dirty Faces as the result of a new govern ment order.

The edict has gone out that there will be no hot water in government offices this winter. The new rule applies to 400,000 civil servants in 18,000 government buildings throughout the country.

Night workers are exempt from this Spartan order. Stokers have been instructed by the office of works to supply warm water—of a strictly limited temperature.

Students Find Rationing Passage in the Good Book

HARRISBURG, PA.—Bible students hereabout insist the Good Book envisioned tire rationing and carries a prophecy of the current conservation of garment materials.

Authority cited for the inevitability of tire conservation is the 18th verse, third chapter of Isaiah, reading:

"In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet and their cauls and their round tires, like the moon."

Another verse in the same chapter says: "That changeable suits of apparel shall be taken away from the people."

Too Much Civilization Proves Bear's Undoing

DECKERS, COLO.—Quick Silver, a three-year-old bear, died—a victim of a desire for civilization.

"We had to dispose of the young fellow," explained John D. Hart, Colorado game warden.

"He was going into taverns and other places. Quite friendly. But when they tried to throw him out, he wanted to fight."

Earlier in his career Quick Silver was taken higher up into the mountains, but he ambled back to civilization.

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. — Mrs. Harry D. Patton recently returned from her vacation in Canada after losing a $10 bill. Several days later she received a letter from the bank in Fernie, B. Minute Make-Ups

By Gabrielle

Before the drying effect of a summer in the sun, give your neck a little extra attention. Night cream, naturally. And during the day work some of the hand lotion over your throat, each time you use the lotion on your hands. Rub it as far around as your costume permits.

Loneliest Job in Royal Canadian Air Force

Flight Sergeant Harry J. Hickson is shown, above right, with the revolver he uses for signalling or scaring away unfriendly wild life in the Canadian forests. (Upper left): After a hard day's work in the bush country, Sergeant Hickson prepares a relaxing cup of tea in traditional woodsman method.

FROM all appearances he might be a trapper or hunter just out of the backwoods, but he's really Flight Sergeant Harry J. Hickson of London, Ont., communications maintenance man of the Royal Canadian Air Force in bush country on the Pacific coast.

Because of the roughness of the territory over which his job takes him, Hickson has had to put aside his Air Force uniform and boots and substitute for them a pair of canvas pants, buck-skin jacket, rubber boots and peaked felt cap.

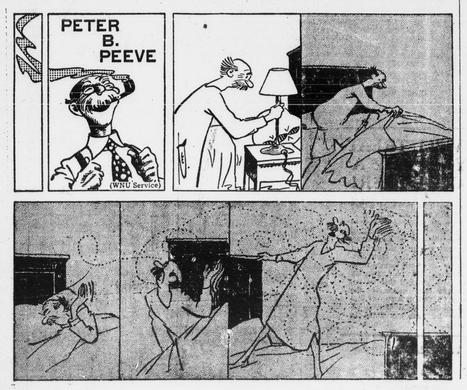
"No, I'm hardly Air Force in appearance, but the job calls for this get-up," laughed Hickson.

On second glance, it might be noticed that an Air Force badge is fastened to his cap and that the revolver strapped to his side is Air Force issue. The revolver, by the way, is used to scare off inquisitive bear or for signalling purposes.

Hickson, a quiet spoken chap, enjoys the isolated life he is living in this wild, west coast forest area.

"It's a new one on me," he said, "but you couldn't find a more interesting country and job."

For 16 years, prior to enlisting in the R.C.A.F. as a telephone cable man, Flight Sergeant Hickson worked for the Bell Telephone Company at London. His job as cable splicer took him to various parts of Ontario but never through such country as his Air Force job takes him.

Through giant Douglas flying boats, over rocky and, in winter, snow-capped mountain ranges around picturesque lakes and through thickly-wooded valleys he hikes in every kind of weather, tending the communication lines which connect bush stations in the territory. Sometimes he works alone, other times he has a crew of men, depending on the type of job which has to be done.


Flight Sergeant Hickson joined the R.C.A.F. in June of last year at London, where his wife and four children are living at present.
